This thread discusses the Content article: Rank Progression of a Dark Angel

Anyone has an opinion on this article? You guys DO check the main page some times, don't you? :D

I would say the only question I'd have is whether it's really possible to reach Grandmaster via all the routes Belial says it is. Has there ever been any record of an Apothecary becoming Supreme GM?

No there hasn't. But with the Grand Master having the ability of naming his successor. I didn't want to exclude it from the realm of possibility. If I had the ability to create an organization Chart I could show how much competition there is to get to the top.

Yeah, I guess you're right. I suppose I just consider it to be a bit of a waste to put someone with so much medical training in a position that's essentially administrative and about planning and logistics. It could happen in extreme cases, of course.

One thing about editing. When I created the unified document, I removed the opening paragraphs, as those were more or less copies of each other. Feel free to add some kind of intro to each section. Also, if you look at the page breaks, you'll see how I did the chapter titles. I also did the same in Fallen.

Good article, some things seem to be mere copy paste... but whatever :p

it was definately a good read. i see where you were comeing from now with the apothicary gm, its just in the wording it sounded more like the medic got the job because nobody else was around at the time to claim the title.

also got a chuckle out of the dreadnoughts. "we know this dread is way older than you but because he's still snoozin your the new venerable dread! congratulations!!!"
